45 YEARS OLD — NILES, ALAMEDA COUNTY, CALIFORNIA, THURSDAY MORNING, AUGUST 31, 1933 — NUMBER 30

CONSTRUCTION ON ROAD THROUGH NURSERY MAY START IN THIRTY DAYS

$1,870 Will Be Spent For Grading and Oiling Strip

According to a statement to this paper by George Wilhelm, Alameda County Surveyor, construction on the road extending First street through the California Nursery property will probably begin within thirty days.

The California Nursery company has finished the removal of shrubbery on the acquired right-of-way, and the moving of the sales room will leave the strip free for immediate construction.

Wilhelm states that the county realizes the importance of this improvement to Niles and the adjacent area, and once started the work will be rushed to an early completion.

Following is an official estimate of the costs of doing the rough grading through the nursery property and finishing the entire extension of First street from the State highway in Niles to the Alvarado-Niles road.

Grading and preparatory work,	$1,435.00
Oiling	435.00
Total cost	$1,870.00

Antone Pereira Passes; Lived In Mission 65 Years

A resident of Mission San Jose for fifty years, Antone Ferreria Pereira, aged 85, pased away at his Mission home Sunday, August 27, after a time of illness.

Pereira was born in Pico, in the Azores in 1848, and came to California in 1869. He came to Mission San Jose fifteen years later and settled there. He was revered as an upright man, and truly one of the pioneers of the region.

He is survived by several children—Mrs. Manuel Machado, Mrs. Mary Haussler, Mrs. A. C. Santos, Mrs. Violet Howard; Mrs. Rose Recend, Joseph, Frank, Joaquin, Thomas, Antone, Jr., Manuel and the late John Pereira. His wife, Mrs. Anne Pereira, passed away some time ago.

Funeral was at 9:00 o'clock Tuesday morning from the Pereira home, with a requiem high mass at St. Joseph's church at Mission San Jose. The Rev. Father Leal officiated. Interment was in the St. Joseph's cemetery. Funeral arrangements were by the Chapel of the Palms, Centerville.

Green Named Teacher at Lincoln School, N. Y.

After coming to Washington township from New York to take a position as night school instructor in art at Washington Union high school, Harry Green, has received word that he has been named a member of the faculty at the Lincoln School in New York City.

Realizing the opportunity opened for Green by virtue of the Lincoln school offer, authorities at Washington Union high school willingly released him. He will leave shortly to take up his work in New York.

The Lincoln School, owned and under the administration of Columbia University, in New York City, is the center from which all modern education methods come. New educational ideas are tested and experimented with there. One of Green's ability should contribute much to education through such a medium.

For many years Green has been striving toward a place where he may apply his ideas, and he has attained it. The prestige of being a member of the Lincoln faculty will be instrumental in his further success. He will be an art instructor, possibly in the high or junior high schools at Lincoln.

The loss of Green to Washington high school is a severe one, but his ability, and the importance of the position opened for him in New York has made his release from the faculty here one willingly given.

FATAL THREE-CAR CRASH BRINGS DAMAGE SUIT

Two actions totalling $51,000 and arising from a fatal three car crash on the Oakland highway near the Santa Clara county line August 13 were commenced in the superior court at San Jose last Thursday by Jos V. Silveria, of Mission San Jose and James Russo, of Niles against Allan Post and S. H. Dunham, of Stockton and Berkeley respectively.

The complaint sets forth that Silveria and Russo's 23-year-old son, Salvador, were passengers in a car driven by young Russo when it collided head on with Dunham's car and was then struck by Posts machine. Russo was killed.

The father is asking $25,000 for the death of his son, and Silveria $26,450 for a crushed arm and wrist which he claims have deprived him of the use of the limb for life.

Silveria and Russo are being represented by the law firm of Jensen and Holstein.

CANYON CRASH FATAL TO PLEASANTON MAN

Joseph Rose, Sr., Succumbs Sunday After Accident At Vallejo Street

Joseph M. Rose, 72, of Pleasanton, died Sunday night at the Hayward hospital from severe shock and injuries received last Friday morning when his car crashed into a large truck at the intersection of Vallejo street and the Niles Canyon road, Niles.

Rose, en route to Pleasanton, proceeded to make the turn into the canyon road without considering approaching traffic, authorities said. A large truck, coming down the canyon attempted to avoid smashing into Rose's machine by swerving suddenly to one side. The quick turn of the truck threw its trailer into the path of Rose's car. The trailer's load, consisting of a shipment of hogs, was scattered about. Some of the animals are still at large.

Although not desperately injured Rose succumbed Sunday night, after contracting quick pneumonia. He had been in poor health for some time, it is said. His wife, Mariana, passed away some weeks ago.

Rose was prominent in the I. D. E. S. and the U. P. E. C. He is survived by two sons: Joseph Rose, Jr., and William E. Rose.

Funeral was yesterday from the St. Augustine church, Pleasanton, at 10:00 a. m. Burial was in the St. Augustine cemetery.

ALAMEDA COUNTY TAX RATES SHOW MODERATE REDUCTIONS THIS YEAR

10c Sliced off County Road Tax, 10c Still Remains

The Alameda county tax rate for the fiscal year 1933-1934, as applicable to Washington township shows definite reductions in all lines. In some towns the rate decrease is less than in others due to the addition of district taxes that did not exist last year. For example, Alvarado has this year a 50c fire protection district tax, non-existent last year.

Due to the energetic and unceasing work of Supervisor Ralph V. Richmond, in the face of the lassitude and opposition of the other members of the board, 10c has been sliced off of the remaining 20c of the road tax. This will mean a large reduction for taxpayers with considerable frontage on the roads.

Following are the rates for various school districts in Washington township:

NILES CHAMBER NAMES COMMITTEE TO DECIDE ON NRA PETITIONS

Petsche, Kirk and Ellsworth to Render Initial Decisions

Meeting Monday noon, the Niles Chamber of Commerce, in an effort to bring order out of a chaotic state of mind concerning the application of the national recovery act in small communities, voted to send a committee composed of A. J. Petsche, George Bonde and H. L. Scott, to a meeting of retailers at Hayward Monday night. Called by the Hayward Chamber of Commerce to discuss a fair code for competitive trade in the Hayward trading area, the meeting drew attendance from all southern Alameda county.

Several of the members questioned the plan to include Niles in the so-called Hayward trading area, contending that Washington township, with its industries and agriculture, should be an area in itself. H. L. Scott stated that it was the object of the NRA to create the largest trading areas possible, each with some urban center. The lack of such a center in the extreme southern part of the county led him to believe, he said, that Washington township would be included in whatever trading area was mapped out for the lower east bay.

In answer to several suggestions that the Niles chamber ignore the Hayward invitation, Supervisor Ralph V. Richmond suggested that a representation be sent, to hear details of the NRA program, if for no other reason.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

By NORMAN H. PARKS, Publisher Register

Advice from the Parlor Intellectuals

The American people are not unlike a lot of children. In fact the average man is just a boy in long pants; the average woman, a girl in corsets.

Anything new is hailed as a panacea for all our ills, and when the bell cows tinkle their bells, everyone falls into the procession no matter where it leads.

The NRA doubtless in many respects—perhaps in most of its aspects—is a wonderful idea, and in practical application will work out generally in a manner beneficial to a nation whose business respiration is very faint. But some support from its so-called intellectual enthusiasts is as hurtful as it is ludricious.

The other night some society woman, who probably never earned a dollar in her life, got on the air to tell her radio listeners to buy everything in sight. If money wasn't available, buy on time. Go the limit. Stock up with everything that could be purchased on credit. First use up your bank balance, then go in debt.

Idiotic! It shows to what extremes physical bulk, and a thimble-full of brains, can carry one.

Almost anyone should remember that the orgy of spending a few years ago, on elastic credit, is one of the major reasons for the condition in which we find ourselves today.

The assumption that any considerable number of people have money to spend for nick-nacks and non-essentials is tommyrot.

* ** * ** *

Hoover went out of the White House pretty unpopular, but there is one thing he said that was true when he said it and true today—"A nation cannot squander itself back into prosperity!"

A Courageous Spirit

The Township Register wishes to felicitate the San Leandro News upon its enterprise, to hold up as an example to others its faith in the future, and to focus the eyes of timid business men upon its fine courage, that they, too, may throw a harpoon into that grim old monster, Depression, and rout him out of the economic picture of American life.

The San Leandro News, under the ownership of Al Neish, has moved into new and commodious quarters in the heart of the business district of its home city. It has added a flat-bed perfecting press, printing direct from roll paper. The capacity of this machine makes large editions of the News a simple task and enables it to branch out into the publishing of community papers on a large scale.

Neish is a young man with vision. But he goes further than just dream. He is a man of dynamic action. He has put life into the News, and broken down the assumption that San Leandro was "impossible" as a newspaper town. When other men are retrenching, Neish is expanding. He is prepared to take advantage of renewed commercial life, now so auspiciously at hand.

Again the Township Register offers its congratulations, and good wishes. May the News' cash-register ring with honest dollars, and its editorial pages shine out as a beacon light for the principles of democracy and individual liberty.

A Bottle Baby

What constitutes "unfair competition?"

Easy! Any man who can take a piece of money away from you.

For our part, we prefer not to have the government act as a wet nurse for our business. If we cannot survive competition, then that should be our hard luck. If we lack the "guts" to stand up against some other man in our particular line of enterprise, then the business world will lose nothing by our demise.

CRUDE STILL PUTS DECOTO VENDOR IN BASTILLE

Pete Rodrigues, of Decoto, is being held in the county jail pending "investigation" as a result of an unexpected call made at his home in Decoto Monday by Deputy Sheriff Hugo Radbruch.

According to reports made to the officers, the Rodrigues home had been the source of supply of liquor which had caused several Mexicans to run amuck in Decoto recently. Radbruch planned to warn Rodrigues Monday, but was so captivated with the amazing still that he decided to hold Rodrigues for the federals.

The still is a wonderful affair, a conical copper boiler, a length of coiled automobile gas line, and a cooler made from an old kerosene can. Some of the liquid evidence was taken by the authorities.

With some 2600 flying hours in his log book, Richards plans to get as much flying experience as possible, then enter into the administrative end of aviation. He is noting conditions, and possible improvements in western air travel.

"Foolishment"

By FRED BURROWS

©, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service

SAM JACKSON opened the door of the safe slowly, but thankfully. In the safe was a certain paper. On this paper appeared the signature of a number of hotheaded young men who, in the heat of their indignation at what they considered a wrong dealing on the part of the government, had signed this document pledging themselves to overthrow the government. Since signing the document the young men had all seen the error of their ways. Now they were exceedingly anxious to destroy the evidence of their foolishness. And Jackson, in entering this office and in opening this safe, was acting for the young men of whom the main leader was his younger brother.

The office in which Jackson was now standing and the safe he was now opening were those of Claude Lagrange, a shyster lawyer, who had been largely instrumental in working the young men up to the point of signing the paper.

The minute Jackson had opened the outer door of the safe and then the thinner door inside he flashed a pocket light on the safe's shelves and compartments. These were filled with papers. Seeing the great quantity of material he must go through Jackson impatiently jerked the papers forth and began examining them carefully. At last he found the paper he was searching for and caught it up with a sigh of relief.

"Hands up!"

"Walk over to that table in the center of the room, put that paper in the center of the table, and then sit down, but keep your hands up!" went on the voice.

And now Jackson thrilled to the sound of the voice. There was no mistaking the identity of the person issuing the voice—it was Clara Ferguson, a recent newcomer in the city, with whom Jackson had fallen violently in love and who had told him one evening not so long ago that she reciprocated his affection.

"Clara!" cried Jackson.

"Y—Yes, it's me," came Clara's voice. "Oh, Sam, I'm so sorry it's you. I've got to—to arrest you!"

"Arrest?" cried Sam. "I don't understand this at all."

"Don't you see?" cried Clara. "I'm in the federal secret service. The government heard about this conspiracy these local young men were mixed up in and sent me here to find out all about it."

Clara in the secret service? There had always been some mystery connected with her occupation from the time she arrived in the city. So she had been detailed on the case? There had been rumors of a secret service agent being on the job. That was one of the reasons why the young men had been so anxious to recover that damning paper.

Slowly Sam took his seat at the table, his face blanched, his heart beating rapidly. As he seated himself Clara switched on the lights in the room and then seated herself opposite him. As she did so Sam threw the paper to the center of the table in front of him.

"Clara," said Sam, "this is a fearful mess we're in. How can I ever explain the whole thing to you?"

"I'm sorry—dreadfully sorry;" she said. "I had no idea it was going to be you when I got the tip that the paper was to be taken from the safe tonight. But, Sam, I've got to see to it that you're taken to the proper authorities."

"But, Clara," Sam protested, "I'm not in this thing myself. I simply came here to get a paper my younger brother signed in a moment of foolishness."

"Now we'll have to go," she said.

"Stand up!" she commanded.

It was while Sam was slowly rising that an amazing interruption occurred. Through the open window a bulky woman rushed into the room. Sam recognized her at once. She was Hannah—Clara's colored "Mammy," who had come with her to the city.

"What's this hyah foolishment? Miss Clara, I done followed you, 'cause I thinks you-all mighten get into trouble. And I done hear you."

As she spoke Mammy caught up the paper from the center of the table. Calmly she drew a match from a capacious pocket, struck it and set fire to the paper.

"Mammy, put that out at once!" cried Clara angrily.

Fascinated, Sam watched the hungry flames eat up the paper—the only existing evidence of his young brother's and his brother's hotheaded chums foolishly planned conspiracy. And as the last bit of paper was consumed Sam looked across the table at Clara. He saw in her eyes a look of inexpressible relief.

Then Sam went around the table and caught Clara in his arms. As he did so he heard Mammy muttering satisfiedly to herself.

"Huh, jes' plain foolishment!" said Mammy.

Burglar Alarm

By ALICE DUANE

©, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service

THE bareheaded young man who stopped before the Barkley Jones house did not look undernourished or weak. He was tall and thin.

He glanced at the front door, then at a slip of paper in his hand. Then he rather stealthily made his way from the front of the house to the back door.

He asked the maid who answered his rapping if there was something to be done about the place. "Just anything," he said.

Annie, the maid, gave one look into his gray eyes and decided that, if she had to pay him out of her own pocket, he would have work for the afternoon.

"Sure," she said. "Just sit down on the steps and I'll ask."

She hurried off to her mistress.

This lady, overplump, over-endowed with this world's goods, sat idly before the living room fire. "I must say, Elsie," she said irritably to a young girl who was playing solitaire, "that you're about as unpleasant a guest as I can imagine. Can't you suggest something to do?"

"Oh," said the girl contritely, "I'm awfully sorry, Aunt Bess, but I came to visit you just to get away from seeing people, especially men. I just love to sit here safely—"

"It's safe enough," snorted Aunt Bess—otherwise Mrs. Barkley Jones. "But I'm bored." Then catching sight of Annie at the door, "Well, now what?" she added crossly.

Annie told her story.

"A poor young feller," she said. "As nice looking as you please. And he doesn't look as if he'd eaten for a week. Just anything he'll do, he says."

"Oh, well!" Mrs. Jones considered. "Why, of course. You couldn't turn him away. Tell him he can clean the cellar. And make him some coffee and sandwiches, if you want."

"I wish," Elsie thought, "that I hadn't been such a fool. But it was his fault, too. He was too brutal to leave me without a chance of explanation. I wish I'd sent him that letter. It would be better to have him know I haven't a speck of pride than not to have him."

In the cellar the young man—"My name's Pete," he told Annie—was looking in troubled perplexity at the neat tray the maid had just brought him. A small pot of coffee, cream and sugar, a pile of bread and butter, sliced chicken and ham.

"More food," he thought. "What'll I do with it? I can't hurt the girl's feelings. Oh, well," he thought, "I might as well try it."

Then, fortified by his lunch, he began to clean up the cellar.

It wasn't until he was almost through that Annie was frightened. Then she realized what he probably was—a burglar.

Annie couldn't stand keeping her suspicions to herself. "Here," she said, "you empty these trash baskets into the barrel there." And she went upstairs, carefully locking the door at the top of the kitchen side, so that the man couldn't follow her.

She burst in upon Mrs. Jones and Elsie.

"Oh, Mrs. Jones," she cried. "It's my fault, I suppose—but that young feller down there—he's been asking me questions, and I'm afraid I've told him a lot about the house and the family! Such a nice young man he seemed, too, at first. But he's a burglar!" And Annie began to cry.

Aunt Bess subsided into a state of semi-hysteria. It was the last straw, she thought, as she watched Elsie trying to quiet the weeping Annie.

"But he can't be a burglar, Aunt Bess," said Elsie reasonably. "He was too obvious, pumping Annie like that. I'll go and see." And she started cellarward, the shaken and still fearful Annie close behind her.

In the cellar, when Elsie got there, bending over the trash barrel with a rapt and ecstatic expression, was the young man.

"Why, Peter Wales!" cried Elsie. "How on earth did you get here?"

"Motored over this morning. Found out at your house where you'd gone. I knew you wouldn't see me, so I tried this way of getting in with some old clothes." He smiled at the bewildered Annie. Then he walked over to Elsie and took her firmly in his arms. "Now listen to me, Elsie," he said. "We'll have no more fooling. You'll marry me—now. As soon as we can get a license. You and I both made a mistake with our silly quarrel."

"Oh, Peter," said Elsie—"I can't! But how did you know?"

"Here!" Peter held her with one arm. He spread the other hand in front of her. She took from it a crumpled, torn scrap of paper. "I saw this in the rubbish—it must have come from your trash basket, a piece of a letter you'd written to me and then torn up when you decided not to send it."

With shining eyes and flushed cheeks Elsie read, in her own handwriting: "—a silly mistake. Oh, Peter, I can't live without you."

Annie gazed in unnoticed fascination as Peter pressed his lips to Elsie's. Aunt Bess waited, in chill and shuddering fear, for news of the burglar.

The inside of electric lamp bulbs is being etched in France by a machine which injects hydrofluoric acid into the bulb through a nozzle. Because these nozzles had to be replaced frequently due to the acid's corrosive action, they are now being made of a nickel-copper-chromium cast iron.

A Family's Hair Self-Bobbing

An unmistakably white family in Norway has had for generations a considerable portion of members with hair as kinky as a negro's. Moreover—believe it or not—this hair bobs itself; for each hair breaks off after reaching a length of 2 or 3 inches.

Early Worship of Cats

Cats were worshiped by the Egyptians and domesticated by them before the time of the oldest monuments of their civilization.

Eskimos' Height, Age

Eskimos are usually between 62 and 64 inches in height. They are a short-lived people, individuals rarely attaining an age of much beyond sixty years.

Crockett in Congress

Davy Crockett was elected and served in congress in 1826 and 1828. He was defeated in 1830, but was re-elected in 1832.

Opossum Can Hang by Tail

The opossum can hang by its tail. The tail is shaped and has much the same appearance as that of a rat. When the young are born they are carried in a pouch on the belly portion of the mother and the usual number of young is six or seven.

When Pedestrians Ruled

Pedestrians have not always been the underdogs! In England in 1836, when huge steam cars showed signs of irritating pedestrians, parliament stepped in and passed a law requiring each vehicle be preceded by a man walking ahead and waving a red flag. Parliament, however, did not stop with the idea that "there ought to be a law." It thought there ought to be two laws. So it passed another taxing these vehicles to extinction.

Trousers for Women in 1450

That women were teased for wanting to "wear trousers," is an old story, as witness an Italian caricature dated 1450, which represents some fashionable women of the period struggling awkwardly to pull on men's trunk-like hose.

Hum of Telephone Wires

Humming of telephone and telegraph wires is caused by the wind. The wire has a natural frequency of vibration the same as a piano string and the wind sets it to vibrating. The fundamental frequency is too low to be heard, but some of the harmonies are audible. The fundamental is given by the wire vibrating as a whole, the harmonies by the vibrating in sections; many of these are ordinarily set up at the same time.

Blue Blood of Parrot Family

The African gray parrot, a beautiful bird, with its ashen gray body black bill, light gray face and scarlet tail, holds his rank among members of the parrot family as a delightful and intelligent pet.

Avocado Pears

The food value of Avocado pears per pound, as purchased, is 652 calories. The full value per pound of the edible portion is 993 calaries; and 70 grams as purchased, or 46 grams of the edible portion, are required to make a 100-caloric food portion.

Number, Please?

Telephone subscribers in Japan who do not like their phone numbers assigned to them may buy another more to their fancy through brokers who perform this service as a regular business.

White House Silverware

The flat silver used at the White House has no particular designation. It is perfectly plain, and the handles of all pieces bear the inscription, "President's House," in English script.

Professional in Sports

A professional in sports is one who is considered to have received, or to be receiving, some remuneration which is directly or indirectly traceable to his prowess in a particular sport. In other words, any player whose ability in some branch of sports enables him to earn money is a professional, and any player who does not capitalize such ability in order to earn money is an amateur.

MORE ON NILES CHAMBER

Secretary A. J. Petsche told the chamber Monday that no word had as yet been received from George Creel, NRA administrator, in answer to a letter sent him last week asking information concerning the chamber's part in exercising power of decision on questions arising from the local application of the NRA code.

President Jones issued the information that the Niles civic body had already been petitioned by two Wasington township industries for release from a section of the code. Jones stated that pending information from authorities, no action should be taken. It was revealed by subsequent discussion that such petitions as those already presented, must be examined by some responsible citizen, who would pass on the worthiness of them. It is the general opinion that Niles chamber will perform this function. To prevent a terrific volume of baseless petitions from flooding the NRA headquarters, no petition will be considered valid unless first examined and endorsed by an unbiased committee. Each petition must be accompanied by a written promise that the petitioner will abide by the decision of the NRA authorities, no matter what that may be. While the petition is being considered, the firm or business house petitioning will be supplied with a striped blue eagle to be displayed in place of the conventional one.

The committee appointed to decide on petitions in the community is made up of three men: A. J. Petsche, W. R. Kirk and E. A. Ellsworth. These men will have the initial consideration of petitions from this section, to discover what merit is in the various requests that may arise. The committee was appointed at the suggestion of several members who felt that the conclusions of any one man may be biased.

To hasten the arrangements for the night meetings of the chamber, a committee consisting of H. L. Scott, A. J. Petsche, Ray Peterson, William Helm and Dr. E C. Grau was named to decide upon details. The night meetings were suggested some time ago as a means to supply more time for constructive discussion.

Next Monday being a holiday, the chamber will meet next on constructive discussion.

THREE DISPLAYS BY CALIFORNIA NURSERY AT FLOWER FESTIVAL

Monterey Type of House, and Patio Garden, Will Be Featured

Niles' California Nursery plans to make a very strong bid for a number of first prizes at the California Flower Festival to be held in the old Durant-De Vaux hall building in San Leandro, September 14-17. Winner of several first places last year, the nursery is this time preparing three displays, meticulously arranged as to detail and with planned use of color.

The trade exhibit, through which the California Nursery will make its sales, will be predominately a display of bulbs. All varieties of lilies will be represented.

Centering on the begonia court, and directly in front of it, will be the main display of the nursery, to consist of a house of the Monterey type, with a patio garden, and outdoor living room. The latter will be featured. Following the semi-tropical motif, color will be derived from designed beds of bright flowers. Sod and shrubbery as a matter of course.

The third display, to be one of three cottage designs in competition, will be an English type cottage of modest design with the modulated and relatively simple garden such as the small home owner with excellent taste might set out.

W.U.H.S. GRIDDERS CONFIDENT OF SEASON

An early season glance at the Washington Union football squad gives the impression that Coach Jesse Regli is going to have a winning team this fall. An air of quiet confidence is noticeable in the men and in Regli. Out for the first days loosening up Tuesday, the boys handled the ball cleanly and sharply. Passes did not wabble, and the few kicks seen were long, high, twisting spirals.

The members of the squad to a man say that this will be Washington's year. Especially Raso, blonde, small, and fiery. Ramos and Rose both handle themselves well, and should develop into fast backs.

Confidence arises for the future from the sophomores on the squad and there are many of them. Regli plans to work them into the team to give them experience this fall.

FORDS LOSE FINAL GAME SUNDAY TO ASHLAND

In spite of a defeat in the final game of their strenuous season, the Hodgkins Fords feel to a man that their efforts have been well rewarded.

Ashland, sporting a composite team of various stars from Class A. Ball clubs in the east bay, spanked the Fords Sunday 14—2. The loss of Fontes at third base was severely felt by the Fords, inasmuch as the Ashlanders kept walloping them down the third base line.

Spud Degermark concluded his season in his steady way. He fanned nine and walked one.

Ferry and Mackenzie each found the seed for two hits out of three tries, these being the heights to which Ford batters soared Sunday.

According to Ira B. Hodgkins, the Fords will play next season, but in all probability as a member of the local league.

LOUIS MILLARD, 68, SUCCUMBS MONDAY TO HEART ATTACK

Body of Caretaker Found By San Jose Fireman

While hiking near the drawbridge three miles north of Alviso Monday, a San Jose fireman named Frank Basile, discovered the body of Louis Millard, aged 68 years, and a caretaker of a bay duck pond for thirty years. He is believed to have succumbed to a heart attack.

He is survived by one sister, Mrs. Julia Hadley, and by one brother, Gus Millard. He was a brother of the late Thomas Millard.

Funeral was yesterday at 2 o'clock p. m. from the Chapel of the Palms, Centerville. Interment was in the I. O. O. F. cemetery at Irvington.

Pleasanton Students To Learn Music

In order to give the children of Pleasanton an opportunity to learn a musical instrument in the band, and to aid parents to decide as to the musical ability of their children, a plan has been devised in which it is possible to hire an instrument from the school board of the Pleasanton grammar school at a nominal rental, for a fixed period.

Clarinets, violins, violincellos, trombones, flutes, are available for hire under this plan for a period of two months. Rentals will range from 25 to 50 cents per week.

Tuition will be given and music loaned for two months to the child, after which is will be necessary for him to purchase his own instrument to carry on his studies. At the end of the two months, these instruments will be available to another group, on similar terms. In the event of the child securing his own instrument, the cost of hire will be deducted from the cost of new instrument. This plan will afford the parent the opportunity of seeing if his child will be able to make good during this time.

Letters are being sent to the homes of children which include a form to be filled in by those wishing to take advantage of the plan. These forms should be returned to Mr. Harry Tripp, the music instructor, who will deal with them in the order in which they are received. There will only beg a limited number of instruments used in the plan.

Pleasanton Firemen, Hosts To County Units

About one hundred members of the Alameda County Firemen's Association enjoyed a barbecue held at McKinley Park recently.

Members of the Pleasanton fire department acted as hosts for the evening. Barbecued steak, salad, baked beans and all the trimmings made up the menu.

Crawford Letham, assistant fire chief of the Pleasanton department was chairman of the affair. He was assisted by members of the department.

An orchestra of the Centerville fire department furnished the music.

C. Letham and M. M. Rodriques acted as chefs. Fire chiefs from all departments in the county were called upon to speak.

LEGION LICKS LIONS IN MILK FUND CONTEST

Keifer, Regli, Merriott Smith, Rathbone, Wahaub Star

"We have met the enemy and they are ours," has been the beaming greeting of legionaires of Washington township post ever since Sunday morning, when the aroused veterans swung the Centerville Lions round and round by their tails on the Washington Union High school diamond. Led by a very effective gentleman named Keifer, the postmen netted fourteen runs to vanquish the Centerville club, 14 to 12.

With the Lions leading eleven to ten in the seventh and last inning, Caruthers grounded to Wahaub at shortstop. Bristow, on second base, dashed toward third into what looked like a sure out and retirement of the side. Amazing to see, Charlie Wahaub ignored the galloping Bristow and heaved the pellet mightily in the direction of Ira B. Hodgkins at first, apparently with the intent of throwing the runner out. No hope. Safe all around. Then came the pin-wheel. Keifer, the mighty, strode to the plate, dusted his large hands and pounded Regli's offering for a double. The legionaires raced 'round the bags with all their might, and when the dust cleared away, there stood the scoreboard—Legion 14, Lions 12.

A complete resume of the game, with all of its diverting moments would take a page, so only high spots will go down to posterity. Loren Merriot, at second base for the Lions gained everlasting fame by virtue of his flawless fielding and affective hitting. He had seven chances at second base and didn't boot a one. He scored three runs and hit safely twice. Principal Rathbone, catching for the Lions, may not have liked so much of Regli's fast ball, but he caught a splendid game, besides rapping out a double. Jess Regli led the hitters for the day with four screeching bingles; two triples and two doubles. He twirled a fine game for the Lions after Harold DeLeon took his place at shortstop. Chick Santos, Lion left fielder, smashed out one triple, even if he did put on a splendid juggling act in left field. Charlie Wahaub, Lion shortstop, is to be presented with a gold medal, it is said. Enough said. Ask E. Dixon Bristow.

For the Legionaries, Keifer galloped off with the colors. He was all over the place, and his fast ball had the Lions licking their lips. Bristow twirled a fine game while he lasted, and thereafter coached. He will be remembered as the guy Wahaub should have tagged. Smith won eternal fame by cleaning a set of loaded bags wtih the only home run of the day. Bob Vieux caught a nice game until he injured his finger. Machado, Caruthers and Edinger each mashed the seed for two bingles apiece.

Not to be omitted is the injured list (and the mortality was high) Bob Vieux, Legion catcher contracted the catchers' delight—a split finger; Charlie Wahaub, Lion shortstop is confined to his chair with a badly sprained ankle (crutches later); and MacDonald, Lion player who twisted his knee the Friday before in practice, is on crutches at present and is thus ahead of Wahaub. Principal Rathbone, although not in pain, glances ruefully at his left hand occasionally. Chic Santos, after much strenuous fly chasing, walks like the tin woodman.

Last in this yarn but foremost in importance is the fact that the game, played for the benefit of the Lion milk fund, realized $18.53 which will be expended in feeding needy kiddies.

Deer Elude Nimrods On Week End Hunts

Four Niles hunters who spent a part of the week-end tramping over the landscape in quest of deer, returned to Niles empty handed.

Clarence Crane, and Joe Machado spent Sunday combing the hills between Niles and Mission San Jose, to no avail. They saw one doe, one wildcat and quantities of scenery.

Tony Alves and O. W. Ebright sallied forth again to their game preserve, but were unrewarded. Ebright was the first hunter to bring in a buck this season. He and Alves bagged one just a few minutes after the season opened on August 1.

CITY VS COUNTRY, IN FORMATION OF STATE TRADE AREAS

Rules Applicable To Cities Detrimental To Rural Regions, Claim

Meeting Monday night at the Hayward city hall, to discuss the limits of a trade area suitable to rural needs, a delegation of Niles business men returned with the statement that no definite information was to be had.

It is the intention of the state to supplement the NRA code with the formation of trade areas, in which rules of fair competition will be enforced. Difficulties arising from these proposed areas are many and diverse. According to business men of the rural districts, rules for price setting and closing hours applicable to the large cities will not be suitable to country regions, in that the nature of the trade is different. Rigid closing rules in the small towns would be detrimental in that much rural trade is transacted at later hours than in the cities, also the volume is smaller.

Many businesses already have codes, to which they are adhering, and the application of a new code would, in many instances, be at cross purposes with the first.

According to reports the state plans to make each trade area as large as possible, which means that unless rural districts form immediately into solid trade areas in themselves they will be tacked on to the areas including, and designed for, the large cities.

F. V. Jones, at the meeting Monday night advocated that the southern part of the county form into a trade unit as soon as possible.

Any study of the problems of regulating prices and hours in business, observers say, resolves down to the fact that some businesses must suffer. All the regulation in the world, designed to eliminate unfair competition, cannot regulate the public choice in buying. Each store cannot have the same number of customers as all the others. Location, cleanliness, nature of the employees, and many other untouchable factors will more or less nullify a great part of fair competition codes.

Those who attended the meet from Niles were George Bonde, P. C. Hansen, A. J. Petsche, and F. V. Jones.

In the absence of O. Whiting, who was to have presided, Granville Browning, of the Hayward Chamber of Commerce conducted the meet.

SPECIAL FEATURES PLANNED FOR RECITAL

Recital of the students of the Campos School of Music, to be held at Washington Union High school, Centerville, sometime early in October, will be featured by many specialty acts. Among the performers who are expected to add much to the program are: Jimmy Collon, Orpheum star; Alvena Oliveria, Natalie Campos, Dorothy Silva, the Pey sisters, Maurice Silva, Harriet De Leon, and Lorraine Peterson. A special treat will be the Three Harmonizers—three very talented young women, according to Campos.

This year, for the first time three special choruses have been trained in keeping with the "night club" idea. In relation to this the version of "The Gold Diggers" song will be one of the bright spots.

Special dances will be interpreted by Phillis Day and E. Rae Benbow. Three pianos, furnished by a San Jose music house will be used. There will be special entertainments between dances.

Ever a popular social event, the recital is expected to attract a large number of people. Financed by funds raised by a dance at Mision San Jose, the recital is open to the public.

The dance at the Mission pavilion on September 16, will be one of the first social events of the fall season.

Cannery Discharges All Workers Under Eighteen

In order that many Niles families, dependent upon the Shuckl cannery work for a livelihood, may be given employment, cannery officials last week decreed that no person under eighteen years of age shall be employed at the Niles plant. All workers under eighteen were discharged.

Busy with a long run on fruit salad, the Shuckl cannery at Niles will operate for some time, according to officials. Departing from the usual method of using canned peaches in the salad run, the plant is this year using fresh peaches in the salad pack. A large part of the fruit salad will be shipped to England.

Pleasanton Merchants Join NRA One Hundred Per Cent

Pleasanton merchants have joined the NRA almost one hundred per cent strong and are working hard to live up to its bylaws.

Displaying the blue eagle on the window does not only mean that one has joined the NRA but it means that every one should live up to its rules. Every day new laws and codes are being adopted under the new plan and every merchant and consumer should keep in touch with the new additional rules.

In Pleasanton no special time has been adopted for the closing and opening hours of business due to the fact that all codes of the NRA have not yet been completed, but as soon as this is done special action will be taken.

All Pleasanton barbers have adopted a set closing and opening hours under the Master Barber's Association in order to comply with the NRA. Their hours are from eight to six on week days and eight to eight on Saturdays.

Under some of the new laws passed this week it was found that from now on it will be a misdemeanor to sell goods at less than they cost the vendor for the purpose of destroying competition.

Bona-fide closing out sales and the sale of damaged or perishable merchandise are exempt.

Another bill amends the fair trade act to brand as unfair competition the advertising or selling of goods at less than the contract price. The third bill prohibits rebates on the giving of gifts or special privileges to purchasers or prospective purchasers as a means of destroying competition.

Although the last law has not yet been interpreted, but to avoid any confusion on the matter Christesen & Greve Pleasanton's men furnishing store, has discontinued the issuing of discount certificates and stamps for the time being. They went on to say that those which are already out will be redeemed.

Everyone should keep in touch with newspapers and radio news flashes in order to obtain last minute news on the laws which are being added to the NRA code. Violation of any of the laws carry stiff penalties.

PLEASANTON MAN DIES AT FAIRMONT HOSPITAL EARLY LAST TUESDAY

Death claimed a well-liked and old pioneer of Pleasanton when George Washington Detjens passed away at the Fairmont hospital last Tuesday morning.

Detjens was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. H. Detjens who went to Pleasanton from San Francisco in 1871. His father was among the pioneer business people in the community. He ran the Pleasanton Hotel which was located where the J. J. Amaral service is now, at the corner of Main and St. Mary's street, and also operated a general merchandise store which is now owned by Bairos & Graham.

George was born in San Francisco sixty-two years ago and came to Pleasanton when an infant. He attended the old grammar school on the hill. He spent his entire boyhood and young manhood in Pleasanton where he won a large circle of friends. When a young man he entered the merchandising business with his father. Later he became a successful mortician.

He was a man of very pleasing personally and humorous nature and was always ready to give aid to those who were in need.

He was taken ill in late years at which time he moved to Oakland where he had been in the employ of the Fairmont hospital. His genial disposition proved a great asset with the hospital staff.

Many a lonely and friendless sufferer, who was confined to the hospital there has felt the comfort of George's cheerful presence during their last hours.

Many friends of his that he had won during his boyhood and recently in Oakland attended the services held at the Chapel of the Graham's Mortuary Wednesday evening. Rev. R. C. Cross officiated at the services.

Private interment was held in Pleasanton Thursday morning with Rev. Edwin B. Hays, of Livermore officiating.

Detjens leaves two daughters, Mrs. Mona Holms, of Livermore, and Mrs. Zora Elder, of Petaluma. Two sisters who survive him are Mrs. C. L. Crellin and Mrs. C. S. Graham of Pleasanton.

PLEASANTON MAN PASSES AWAY IN OAKLAND

Costello, who was born at Altamont 63 years ago, passed away last Thursday following a lingering illness. He died at an Oakland hospital shortly after arriving there.

He was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Costello, who was a well known resident of Altamont and the Amador valley. He never married, but lived with his brother, Charles, who is the only one left to mourn his passing. Funeral arrangements were in charge of the Graham mortuary.

SIX DEER BAGGED BY PLEASANTON HUNTERS

Deer hunters in Pleasanton proved their skill over the last week-end when six large bucks were brought in from the Livermore mountains.

So far this season only a few bucks have been bagged by Pleasanton sportsmen but it was not until this week that the men were lucky.

All six deer were shot in the Livermore mountains. Jack Pous got a three pointer in the section commonly known to all hunters as the bear trap. Manuel de Ponte and Bert Williams each came home Sunday evening with a forked horn bagged in the Livermore hills.

Tuesday morning three large forked horn bucks were brought in by Clarence Frager. These were killed at the Rowell's ranch in the Livermore mountains. Those who killed the three deer were Manuel Frager, Sr., William and Clarence Frager.

MOSQUITOES GIVE TROUBLE DURING LARVAE STAGES

It must be the climate. Anyway in line with Alameda County's reputation for growing things bigger and faster than anything else, local mosquitoes have established a new world record for rapid breeding.

This means grief for Roland Bendel, Washington township foreman. Bendel's job is to kill the mosquito larvae and pupae before they get out of the water in which they breed. Inasmuch as the most efficient oiling rarely kills more than 90 per cent of the insect brood, Bendel has to be on hand again in 7 days to wipe out the hundreds of offspring which each female mosquito will produce.

Bendel and his crew last week dug 810 feet of ditch on Mallard Marsh, and oiled 8,310 feet of roadside ditch and dairy drain, 10 acres of marsh and swamp, and 239 cesspools in Decoto, Niles, and Mission district.

Keeping Birds for Pets

Old Roman records show that aviaries for keeping birds for pleasure were started at least a century B. C. Among the birds known to have been confined in private aviaries at that time were blackbirds and nightingales.

The Actress Incognito

By H. IRVING KING

©, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service

THERE was a touch of the theatrical about her as she passed with her swinging gait down the lobby of the hotel. Just a touch, not a loud pronouncement. It was a hotel on a Florida beach; a moderate-priced, retiring, restful sort of place, just suited to its patrons who came year after year.

Of course, every year there were a few new faces. This season the new faces were those of Rosalie Maltravers and Charles Burdick. Rosalie was the girl with the theatrical touch about her and Charles was the young man who sat watching her intently as she strode through the hotel lobby.

It was whispered that she was a celebrated actress down there incognito.

As for Charles Burdick, his manner and clothes were so perfect that it had been decided that he was a young man of "wealth and fashion."

On the third evening after the arrival of the perfectly equipped and perfectly mannered Mr. Burdick, he and the celebrated actress incognito sat on the veranda of the hotel.

"Somehow, do you know, Miss Maltravers," said Charles, "your face seems familiar to me. Now where could I have seen you?"

Rosalie gave a little gasp and replied, "Oh, dear. It's no use for me to try to hide away—and just rest. People will recognize me. I may as well admit that I'm merely an actress, seeking quiet retirement in this delightful and obscure place to recover from the nervous strain caused by my exacting work."

"Acting must be hard work," replied Charles. "No wonder so many actors and actresses suffer from nervous breakdowns. May I go so far as to ask your stage name?"

"Ah," laughed Rosalie, "that I may not—or will not—tell you. It would be all over the hotel in half an hour and I should have no peace. And may I add that you yourself, Mr. Burdick, appear to be somewhat of a mystery, according to the gossip of the hotel? Tell me your real name."

"Really," replied Charles, "I must have my secrets as well as yourself. I, too, seek peace and not publicity."

After that Charles and Rosalie were together so much that everybody in the resort considered the affair as settled.

Never, never had the guests at the little hotel enjoyed their sojourn there so much. They wrote off reams of letters to their friends in the North about it. The lovemaking of Rosalie and Charles progressed rapidly, but after that first talk of theirs they let the mystery of their real identity stand as it was—as if there was no mystery. Or was it that all other mysteries were swallowed up in the mystery of love? Sometimes Rosalie would have a moody spell; sit silently, evidently thinking deeply and letting Charles do all the talking.

One evening as they sat in the hotel garden, the moon shining on the sea and a gentle wind waving the Spanish mass upon the live oak trees, Rosalie after one of these fits of meditation said, "Charles, I am almost tempted to tell you my real name."

"You need not, dearest," replied Charles, "unless you want to. It makes no difference. It is you that I care about. You are all the world to me. You know it. Now, then, will you marry me?"

Rosalie turned her head aside and said softly, "What would your wealthy family say to your marrying an actress? In some quarters there is still prejudice against the stage, you know."

"Nonsense," answered Charles, "that sort of thing vanished long ago. Again I ask, will you marry me?"

"When I have told you who I am, if you will want me, I will."

"Don't bother," replied Charles. "I know who you are. You are that demure little stenographer who works for Hayden and Blankford in the Magathum building and are down here taking a vacation, the first in years. I have often seen you in the elevator, or passed you in the hall, but you never would look at me."

"You horrid thing," sobbed Rosalie. "Why didn't you tell me you knew me at once and not let me make a fool of myself passing as an actress. But you needn't think yourself so smart. You are that young lawyer who has an office on the top floor and I have known you all along. But I didn't imagine that you knew me. And, oh, I always did long to be an actress."

"You are a perfect actress, darling," replied Charles soothingly, "but as you remarked when we first met down here, good acting is a great strain on the nervous system. What say, Miss Ruth Mathews—shall we go back to New York and get married? Business is pretty good with me; you won't have to

Mountain Goat Well Shod

The ease with which the Rocky mountain goat is able to adapt itself to either soft snows or bare rocks is due to the peculiar construction of the animal's hoofs. These have an outer shell with knifelike edges and a sort of rubber padding on the inside.

Clayton-Bulwer Treaty

The object of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty was to facilitate and project the construction of a canal at Nicaragua between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans. It was later abrogated by the Hay-Pauncefote treaty of 1902.

Peru's Capital Gets New Dress

Lima, Ancient City of the Pizarros, Is Undergoing Modernization.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

DEMOLISHING here, building there; installing modern water and sewerage systems; tearing up rough, age-worn cobblestones, putting down smooth modern concrete and asphalt in their stead; opening up new highways both to the mountain and the sea; and developing motor routes to the outlying regions of the plain: thus the makers of new Lima are transforming the Peruvian capital, city of the Pizarros.

The older portion of the city, as well as the newer region which circumscribes it, is sharing in the modernization. True the older section is and must remain an area of one-way streets, for its thoroughfares are so narrow that even street cars must observe the one-way law. Likewise, the sidewalks are so lacking in elbow room that only two people can pass one another at a time, and the one on the outside must keep a close watch lest he be struck by a passing trolley.

Old and new fight for supremacy. The blue-necked turkey buzzards have lost their role as the official scavengers; the ox-cart has given place largely to the motor truck; the old barouche has abandoned the streets to the modern automobile; and the patient, panniered donkey is making his last stand.

Even Pizarro's stern old palace is feeling the urge toward modernization. In days gone by, there was no street in Lima that had a single name throughout its length. Each block had its own particular designation. The two streets that led from the Plaza San Martin to the National Palace are six blocks long. Each possessed six different names, one for each block.

The municipal authorities wanted to change all this and gave each street a single designation for its entire length. The one they called the Giron de la Union and the other the Giron Carabaya.

But the populace would have none of it. The man who did business on the northwest side of the Plaza de Armas still wanted to have his store on Escribanos, and the one who held forth on the next block still insisted he was doing business on Mercaderes, and they continue to do so. Consequently the Giron de la Union is swallowed up by the several calles which compose it.

These may be named without modern-day rhyme or reason, and they certainly are without alphabetical or other indications of their sequences; but the people cling to them, despite whatever confusion it costs the post office, however, much it may complex the visitor, and whatever harvest it may bring the taxi drivers.

How the System Works.

Many interesting stories are told illustrating how this mysterious system works. One concerns a stranger who hailed a taxi in Calle La Merced and asked the chauffeur to drive him to "Baquijano veinte cinco." The driver did not bat an eye, but drove like Jehu up Jesus Nazareno, skidded on two wheels into Giron Carabayo, raced around Plaza San Matin, and whirled up through Boza, landing his shaken passenger at the address given—on the same street, but simply in the next block from where he started!

The name Mercaderas tells us of the day when that block was the Wall Street of Lima and Escribanos or the public letter writers who were sheltered under the portals on the west side of the Plaza. Calle Mantas proclaims the square where the ladies of Peru's golden past "spent their husbands' substance in riotous purchase of shawls, homespuns, Indian textiles, and lingerie."

The history of Lima's past is written in her streets, in names that the municipality long has wanted to wipe out in favor of through designations and numbered blocks. But the people of the city cling to their streets with a devotion that will not permit convenience to triumph over romantic ties with the past.

In wandering about the old city, one comes upon many an architectural relic of the days of the viceroys; but, among all of these, none is more impressive than the monastery of San Francisco. There one may be ushered into a porcelain garden where the artistic tiles of the cloister compete with the living flowers that bloom in the earth they inclose.

No one has described more beautifully the effect of this porcelain garden than Mr. F. P. Farrar, of the West Coast Leader. "Here," he says, "is a porcelain garden, a ceramic border of springtime, where the blues of delphinium and lupine, the yellow of cystisus and the gold of colchicum, the creamy white of arubis and the mauves of aubrietia, blend into the fresh foliage of the overhanging trees and the azure of the new-washed skies."

The charm of the story of the origin of this porcelain garden almost equals the beauty of the ceramic triumph itself. On a November morning in 1619 a vast crowd had gathered in the Plaza de Armas, for there was to be a public hanging, and these events were Roman holidays for the populace.

The public crier had announced: "The Warrantable and Royal Audiencia of this City of the Kings has condemned to suffer a shameful death on the gallows Alonso Godinez, native of Guadalajara, in Spain, for the murder of Marta Villoslada without fear of judgment human or divine. Let him who did so pay the penalty! This sentence is to be read in the presence of all lest they meet a like end! Let justice be done!"

Came a Reprieve.

The condemned man had taken his stand beneath the noose and the hangman was nervously adjusting the fatal knot. Suddenly a monk pushed his way through the throng, climbed the gallows platform, and handed a parchment to the captain of the guard. After the latter had read it, the two engaged in a moment of animated conversation, after which the padre led the condemned man away and into the portals of the monastery of San Francisco. The crowd, disappointed, hung about the Plazuela de San Francisco discussing this strange overthrow of justice.

But later the reason for reprieve became known. That morning the condemned man had made what he thought would be his last confession on earth, to the prior of the monastery. He said that he was a potter by trade and that he had learned the art both of making and setting tiles.

Years before, Dona Catalina Huanca had brought from Spain a magnificent collection of tiles for the decoration of the new cloisters at San Francisco; but neither plan nor a tile setter had come with them, and Lima had no tile setters. So for years the tiles had been piled up in a corner of the monastery; many were stolen and more were broken. Would Providence ever open a way for their setting?

Here seemed to be the answer; the prior saw an opportunity to let the man who had murdered a woman in a drunken brawl repent his sins in a lifelong task of setting these tiles. So he hastened to the viceroy to implore the pardon of the murderer, and the viceroy, a descendant of the Borgias, seeing poetic justice in remitting the penalty of the scaffold and imposing a task of service that would require a lifetime, granted the commutation of sentence.

One can see today the wisdom of that act of mercy-tempered justice. Alonso Godinez was a true artist, who loved his work and threw his soul into it. Today "the walls blossom with pictures which in their mellowness, richness and seductive beauty rival those of the Alhambra itself; and it is doubtful if outside of Spain there is to be found a finer example of porcelain entablature in the heyday of its art than here."

Lima is peculiarly a city of churches, with some 70 in its limits; and, with nearly four centuries of outstanding ecclesiastical tradition behind them, the people are much given to buying religious objects. The Cathedral is a magnificent structure, much larger than Pizarro built, but still not so grand as the one erected during the early years of the viceregal regime and destroyed by the great earthquake that wiped out Callao.

The high altar is of massive silver construction. In the chapel of the Virgin is a celebrated image presented by the Emperor Charles V of Spain, and in the Chapel Arcediano an original painting attributed to Murillo, representing Jesus and Veronica.

Here rests a glass-and-marble casket which is most interesting of all, for it contains the half-mummy, half-skeleton reputed to be the remains of the great conqueror.

Fashionable Hats Taboo.

The attire for church occasions is perhaps the most conservative in the New world. Even those women who dress in the latest Parisian modes elsewhere put on their plain black mantillas when going to church. In some congregations those who come in fashionable headgear are told politely to remove them and substitute their mantillas before they are allowed to be seated.

Among the fine old residences of Lima, one of the most impressively beautiful is the famous palace of Torre-Tagle, once the home of the marquise of that name, but now the headquarters of the ministry of foreign relations.

The City of the Kings long has been famous for its brilliant social life, with a constant succession of luncheons, teas, dinners, dances, champanadas, and receptions. Nearly four centuries of wealth, leisure, and opportunity have written their impress of culture on the descendants of the nobility and official classes of the colonial regime.

"Black Hole of Calcutta"

"Black Hole of Calcutta" was the military jail of Fort Williams, at Calcutta, India, a room about 18 by 14 feet 10 inches in size, with only two small windows barred with iron. In 1756 a large native army took possession of the city and all the British who had not escaped were imprisoned in it. This was in the month of June, in which the tropical heat of Calcutta is most oppressive. When the door of the prison was opened in the morning, only 23 persons out of 156 were found alive.

The probability is that people dream much more nowadays than their ancestors did in olden times, for flowing into our minds every day are stronger streams of exciting news, and sights and sounds.

Commerce and Navigation

Treaties of commerce and navigation are agreements between nations relating to the privileges and immunities which may be enjoyed by the commerce and by the citizens or subjects of each party to the treaty. The object of such treaties is to procure the greatest possible freedom from discrimination in the pursuit of trade and the expansion of industries and for this purpose such treaties are reciprocal in terms.

"Hussy" Almost Forgotten Word

A term of opprobrium so harsh that it comes under its own shadow and its use discouraged almost as a vulgarism, "hussy" is a word that has lost caste from its original status in the language. When used now it is in the spirit of contempt or reproach, a "hussy" being a worthless woman, a "jade." But originally she was merely a housekeeper. For "hussy" is a contraction of "housewife" or the older form "huswife!"

Largest Botanical Gardens

The largest collection of living plants is very likely that of the Jardin des Plantes, Paris. The catalog of this institution enumerates more than 20,000 species. The Jardin was founded in 1635 by a physician to Louis XIII, and occupies about seventy-five acres. Kew gardens, the royal botanical garden near London, which has its branches in every English colony, is certainly not far behind. The largest in this country are probably the Missouri Botanical garden, St. Louis, and the New York Botanical garden, the Bronx.

Climate in Sahara Desert

The climate is not absolutely uniform throughout the Sahara desert, which covers a wide range of territory. In some sections of the desert there is no rainfall, in others it is scanty. There is, however, considerable rain in the region of the Central mountains.

Highest and Lowest Points

Mount Everest is the highest point of land in the world, having an elevation of 29,141 feet. The Dead sea is the lowest place in the world, 1,300 feet below sea level. There would be 30,441 feet difference in altitude between them.

"Be Sure You're Right"

The origin of the phrase, "Be sure you're right, then go ahead," is attributed to David Crockett, one of the intrepid defenders of the Alamo, Texas, who was shot under the direction of Santa Anna March 6, 1836.

Origination of Name "Scotland"

The name Scotland for the region north of England originated in the Eleventh century when part of it was called Scotia, a name previously applied to what is now Ireland.

LEWIS MUSICK WEDS HANFORD CIRL AT RENO

Lewis W. Musick, of Newark, and Miss Dorothy Berneita Irwin, of Hanford, were united in Marriage in Reno, Nevada, Wednesday evening of last week as a climax to a courtship that began last September in Orland where both were employed in the high school. The young couple had planned to be married in Hanford, but a hasty call to Alturas made it impossible for Musick to abide by the three-day marriage law in California and attend a faculty meeting of high school teachers in Alturas Saturday of that week; hence a hurried trip to accomodating Reno where a ceremony was performed by Reverend W. M. Case in the Federated Church manse.

The groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Eph. L. Musick, of Newark, and he is a graduate of the Washington Union High school and the Oakland Heald college, and he holds a master's degree in biology from Stanford university. He is a member of Phi Delta Kappa.

The bride is a daughter of Mrs. J. L. C. Irwin and the late Senator Irwin, of Hanford. She is a graduate of the University of California, where she specialized in physical education. In Berkeley she was affiliated with the Alpha Xi Delta sorority.

The newly-weds left Newark late Thursday evening for Alturas, where they will make their home. In heading the science department in the Alturas High school, Mr. Musick will install the unit system, which has been worked so successfully in the Orland school. Mrs. Musick has withdrawn from her teaching position in Orland.

ATTENDANCE GAIN

The Newark school opened Monday with the same staff of teachers in charge of the school as last year. On the opening day 196 pupils were enrolled. That was a gain over the first day last year but was considerably short of the enrollment at the close of the school in June.

Elizabeth Laudenslager, who holds a position of governess in a Sacramento home, visited her parents in Newark Sunday afternoon.

The first game of the series for the Southern Alameda county league, was won by the Newark J and F's team. The score was 13 to 7.

The Newark pitcher, Wilson, struck out ten men. The J and F's collected 13 hits in seven innings while Watson pitched. Watson was then replaced by Joe Blacow.

Ornellas, Newark player, collected four hits out of six tries; Lazzarine collected three hits out of three tries; Dondero collected three hits out of six tries, and hit two triples. Soito, also a J and F man hit a double.

Irvington men, Rose and Marshall hit two out of four tries; Rose hitting one two base and a three base hit. Marshall followed up by the same as Rose. Lemas, for Irvington, collected a three base hit.

Next Sunday the second game of the series for the championship of the league will be played on the Newark Grammar school grounds. A large crowd is expected to attend the game.

Firemen Quench Auto Blaze Saturday Night

Niles firemen were called from their sundry pursuits Saturday night at 10:00 o'clock to quench an automobile blaze across the street from the Niles theater. Answering the alarm, the fire fighters were confronted with a locked car, with cushions ablaze. Breaking a window, the department boys poked in the nozzles of the hoses and did a thorough job of extinguishing.

E. Betschalp, Newark, owner of the car, was in the theater at the time. His name was called, apparently misunderstood by him as he did not appear for some time.

He later said that sparks from a pipe probably ignited the upholstery. The back seat and one door of the car was badly damaged.
